PAKISTAN REACTS TO TRUMP'S 'LIES' TWEET

I Pakistan's civilian and military chiefs Tuesday rejected "incomprehensible" U.S. comments after President Donald Trump tweeted angrily about Pakistani "lies and deceit," with Islamabad summoning U.S. Ambassador David Hale to the Pakistani Foreign Office late Monday to explain Trump's tweet, media said. The ministry could not be reached for comment but the U.S. Embassy in Islamabad confirmed Tuesday that a meeting had taken place. Trump said the United States had been rewarded with "nothing but lies and deceit" for "foolishly" giving Pakistan more than $33 billion in aid in the last 15 years. "They give safe haven to the terrorists we hunt in Afghanistan, with little help. No more!" he tweeted on Monday.

SEN. ORRIN HATCH WILL NOT SEEK RE-ELECTION

2 Republican Senator Orrin Hatch said Tuesday he will not seek re-election in November, opening the door to a potential Senate bid by Mitt Romney, the 2012 Republican presidential candidate who has been one of the party's harshest critics of President Donald Trump. "Every good fighter knows when to hang up the gloves. And for me, that time is soon approaching," Hatch said in a video statement posted on Twitter. "That's why after much prayer and discussion with family and friends, I've decided to retire at the end of this term."

NEW CAMPAIGN TARGETS SEXUAL HARASSMENT

4 "The clock has run out on sexual assault, harassment and inequality in the workplace. It's time to do something about it," reads an initiative launched this week by 300+ Hollywood women. It's called Time's Up, and it includes industry powerhouses like Reese Witherspoon, Kerry Washington and Brie Larson. Time's Up is calling for Hollywood women to wear black at the Golden Globes on Sunday night to raise awareness, according to The New York Times. Some men in the industry have vowed to participate in the red carpet blackout as well. Time's Up is also working with the group 5050by2020 to achieve a 50/50 gender parity model where "women are equally represented at every level — especially in leadership positions and in positions of power" by the year 2020. SAM BRODSKY

US SERVICE MEMBER KILLED IN AFGHANISTAN

5 One U.S. service member was killed and four others wounded during a "combat engagement" in the eastern Afghan province of Nangarhar, the U.S. military said in a statement Tuesday. The incident took place Monday in Achin, Nangarhar province, the statement said. Two of the wounded service members are being treated at a medical facility and are in stable condition, it added. Nangarhar, on the porous border with Pakistan, has become a stronghold for ISIS, generally known as "Daesh" in Afghanistan, which has grown to become a dangerous militant group since it appeared around the start of 2015. The Taliban and ISIS have frequently fought each other in the Nangarhar province, and both have been targeted by sustained U.S. airstrikes.

Northeastern US gripped by record cold, with snow in the upcoming forecast

Frigid weather had struck much of the country for the past few days, breaking long-standing temperature records.

A record-shattering arctic freeze kept its grip on the U.S. Northeast on Tuesday, closing schools and affecting travel on the first business day of 2018, and forecasters warned the region could be walloped by snow later in the week.

Boston tied a 100-year-old record on Tuesday when it marked seven consecutive days that the temperature did not top 20 degrees Fahrenheit, and people whose work kept them outside struggled to find ways to keep warm.

Officials throughout the region urged residents to alert social services if they saw people stuck outside in the cold.

"We want every resident to have shelter and warmth," Washington,

Beacon Hill and the Massachusetts Ave. Bridge reflect in the frozen Charles River. DEREK KOUYOUMJIAN

D.C., Mayor Muriel Bowser said on Twitter. Bitter cold was blamed for at least four deaths across the United States over the New Year's holiday.

The higher temperatures were expected to be accompanied by heavy snow in the East Coast by as early as Wednesday, according to the National Weather Service.

"New York City will probably expect anywhere from 2 to 4 inches of snow," said weather service meteorologist Greg Gallina. "The maximum swath will be from southern Rhode Island to the south of Boston and into Maine. Southeast Maine will experience anywhere from 12 to 15 inches of snow."

In Iowa, Massachusetts, Indiana, Ohio and North Carolina, school districts canceled or delayed the start of classes as bitterly cold weather, 20 degrees to 30 degrees below normal, were expected across the eastern half of the United States.

The cold was blamed for the deaths of two men in separate incidents in Milwaukee, according to the Milwaukee Journal Sentinel. A homeless man was found dead on a porch in Charleston, West Virginia, while another man was found dead outside a church in Detroit, and police said he may have frozen to death, local news outlets reported.

The cold should ease across most of the country heading into the weekend, Gallina said.

"We're going to see a steady of warm-ups at the end of the weekend when temperatures become average again across the Great Plains and into the Midwest by Sunday," he said. "Another cold blast will come in on Monday, but it won't be as brutal. This warm spell will basically be a short respite from the severely cold weather." REUTERS

Boston cold and snow will disrupt first week of 2018

Boston is no stranger to bitter cold, but this week is shaping up to be a particularly chilling challenge.

Frigid temperatures are expected to continue this week, according to the National Weather Service's local forecast. Wednesday and Thursday will see temperatures in the mid to high 20s, with Friday and Saturday dipping down into the teens and single digits. Thursday is expected to bring significant snowfall of between 4 and 6 inches to Boston, according to the NWS.

Several Massachusetts schools delayed or canceled classes on Tuesday due to the dangerously low temperatures. The MBTA has warned that there will likely be service delays throughout the week, especially during morning commutes. Transit officials recommended commuters give themselves 20 extra minutes to get where they need to go.

Three years after MBTA service problems were exposed by the harsh winter of 2015, the transit authority's systems are being put to the test again, with mixed results.

MBTA users in recent days have faced a blend of satisfactory service combined with sometimes lengthy delays and cancellations as the area copes with frigid days and nights and riders deal with late arrivals and missed appointments.

One major aspect of service south of Boston was knocked offline completely Monday night when the T announced that its ferry from Hingham to Boston would be suspended until further notice due to a dock damaged by ice. People who usually take the ferry were advised to instead board the Greenbush commuter rail line.

The T's core rail system and commuter rail systems have been affected by delayed and disabled trains, according to the T's service alerts, as well as track, switch and mechanical problems. MORGAN ROUSSEAU

Saint West's pneumonia scare

It was a terrifying New Year's for Kim Kardashian West. Not because of the chilling thoughts of her sisters' spawn, but because Saint West was hospitalized for pneumonia.

The 2-year-old recently spent three nights in the hospital — and Kardashian West calls the experience “so scary.”

“My precious baby boy is so strong!” she wrote on Instagram. “After spending three nights in the hospital & seeing my baby get multiple IV's and hooked up to oxygen machines, our end of year was challenging. Pneumonia is so scary!”

The 37-year-old says Saint is all better now, calling the little love muffin “so resilient” and using the mixed baby angel emoji. Legitimately appropriate!

TMZ reported earlier that Saint had been taken to a hospital in Los Angeles on Thursday, where

Paris Hilton is getting married

Paris Hilton — a woman you may know as the self-professed matriarch of taking selfies — is engaged to be married. OK!

The 36-year-old former star of “The Simple Life” reportedly got engaged to her boyfriend of two years, Chris Zylka, 32. He popped the question just before the New Year, during a ski trip in Aspen, and photographers from People were suspiciously there for some reason.

“I am so excited to be engaged to the love of my life and my best friend,” Hilton said in an absolutely unrehearsed statement to People. “I have never felt so happy, safe and loved. He is perfect for me in every way and showed me that fairy tales really do exist!” Ah, to be rich enough to have survived 2017 and still believe in fairy tales.

No words of wisdom from Zylka yet, but I think the tattoo he has that reads “Paris” in Disney font says enough, yeah?

America Ferrera expecting a baby friend

America Ferrera is gonna have a baby. The “Superstore” actress announced via social media that she and her husband, Ryan Piers Williams, are expecting their first child.

“We’re welcoming one more face to kiss in 2017! Wishing you #MásBesos in the New Year,” she wrote on New Year’s Eve. Aw.

The couple, who just celebrated 12 years together, first met when Williams, 36, cast Ferrera in his student film while studying at the University of Southern California. They were engaged in June 2010 and married in 2011.

Mazel, y’all!

Hoda Kotb to co-host ‘Today’

Hoda Kotb is moving up. Tuesday, the 53-year-old was named co-anchor of the “Today” show, just a month after Matt Lauer was fired after allegations of inappropriate sexual behavior. Kotb will host the first two hours of the program with Savannah Guthrie and — thank God — will continue to co-host the fourth hour with Kathie Lee Gifford.

“Hoda is, in a word, remarkable,” NBC News Chairman Andy Lack said in an email to staff Tuesday. “She has the rare ability to share authentic and heartfelt moments in even the most difficult news circumstances. It’s a tribute to her wide range and her innate curiosity.”

Kotb told E! News that Lauer, disgraced though he may be, texted her a congratulations. “He was sweet this morning,” she said. “Certain texts popped up, and there was one from Matt: ‘Congratulations!’ He said some nice words.” Sure! Have fun, Hoda!

Oh, that’s nice.

Christian Bale on why 'Hostiles' is tragically relevant

Sitting down with the Academy Award-winning actor, whose latest film is a decidedly raw take on the Western.

GREGORY WAKEMAN
@MetroNewYork
gregory.wakeman@metro.us

Christian Bale didn't expect his latest film, "Hostiles," to be so timely when he first read the script.

But as social unrest has multiplied all over America, the Western — which tells the story of a U.S. cavalry officer escorting a dying Cheyenne war chief and his family from New Mexico to Montana in 1892 — has taken on a greater relevance.

"It wasn't something that I thought about whilst deciding to make it," Bale explains. "I decided to make it because I just thought it was a great story."

"It looks as who we are, who these characters are, and who America is in a raw and visceral way," he continues. "And seeing the division, the comfort that in this country people have started to express, directing hatred toward those who are different. It has become relevant. Tragically relevant."

In "Hostiles," the Bale plays Captain Joseph J. Blocker, a man of very few words.

words. And the famously Method actor went to great lengths to learn about the life and culture of the Cheyenne, as well as the language itself, with help from an indispensable member of the crew, Chief Phillip.

"He would do a blessing each morning. Producers and ADs were understandably a bit [claps hands], because they were like, 'Crack on. Crack on.' But it was a wonderful thing. Because it really settled us and gave a good sense of community to all of the filmmakers."

"You'd have all these hard-arse wranglers and stuntmen bawling their eyes out," he continues. "The nature of the film was a very raw one. And it helped immensely. It was very meaningful and separated it from the herd, and those films that are just rush, rush, rush."

All of which has combined to give "Hostiles" an integrity that is often lacking from other Hollywood stories, especially when it comes to Westerns.

You'll be able to spot this for yourself when "Hostiles" is released in New York on Dec. 22, while it will be extended across the rest of the country over the next few weeks, into the New Year.

Bale stars as Captain Joseph J. Blocker, a man of few words.

Become a better home chef with the #Cook90 challenge

Kick off 2018 with a tasty resolution: cooking three meals a day for a month.

@yatinbrooklyn
kate.mooney@metro.us

If you're looking for a New Year's resolution that doesn't feel like punishment, as dieting or sober January often do, the #Cook90 challenge might appeal to you. It isn't about calorie counting or depriving yourself; it's a celebration of home cooking, breaking bread with friends and family and consuming what makes you happy — so long as you make it yourself.

Founder David Tamarkin first came up with the #Cook90 challenge — a pledge to cook three meals a day over a 30-day period — on New Year's Day three years ago. At the time, he was going through a rough patch when he realized that cooking alleviated his anxiety. "There's a mindfulness and meditative quality to cooking," he says. He figured he'd do it more often.

Cooking three meals a day for 30 days might sound daunting, and Tamarkin gets this: He lives in NYC and works full-time as the editor of Epicurious.

"I am a cooking person but I'm not necessarily a super organized person," says Tamarkin. "What Cook 90 does is it forces you to fit daily cooking into a hectic life."

As a bonus, eating at home also saves money, and even if you're not counting calories, studies show that making your own meals ends up being healthier than eating out.

Tamarkin has devised a plan to make it doable. To participate, sign up on Epicurious.com and you'll receive a newsletter with a suggested grocery list and a weekly meal plan. Follow it down to the recipe, use it for meal inspiration, or do your own thing. You can hold yourself accountable by posting your meals on social media with the hashtag #cook90, or follow along others' culinary trials for camaraderie. Here's how it works.

#Cook90 rules

You can eat whatever you want, as long as you cook all your meals. Tamarkin defines cooking as "transforming raw ingredients with heat," or "taking two or more raw ingredients and combining them to make something greater than the sum of their parts." So, making a sandwich counts; heating up a can of soup or a frozen burrito does not.

Breakfast is free

Tamarkin encourages participants not to cook the same thing more than twice — except for breakfast.

should," he says. However, Tamarkin suggests not eating leftovers more than twice.

Instead, make "next-overs," or leftovers repurposed to create a different meal. For example, if you make a roast chicken for one meal, shred it into tacos or diced it up in a caesar salad.

You get three cheat meals

"This is not supposed to be a punishment," he says. "Sometimes you need to get out." Treat yourself by eating three meals out during the month.

Cook with others

Take the opportunity to throw dinner parties and potlucks during the long, cold month. "You learn from other people, it's fun, it creates community," Tamarkin says.

Become a better home chef

After completing a #cook90, Tamarkin says that while he definitely doesn't make every meal, the habit of cooking sticks with him and he has plenty of new recipes to get him through the winter. He also likes to do a #cook90 in the spring for a refresher.

Take the #Cook90 challenge and cook three meals a day over a 30-day period. PROVIDED

CAN ANYONE BEAT THE PATS?

This is not the best Patriots team of the Bill Belichick-Tom Brady era.

Far from it, actually. You could easily make the case that this is the weakest Pats team since 2009, when they had guys like Brandon Meriweather, Leigh Bodden, Shawn Springs and Kyle Arrington playing key roles on defense. Rob Gronkowski was still bumming around at the University of Arizona then, and Tom Brady was still working his way back to elite status after suffering that ACL tear in 2008. That 2009 group was quickly bounced from the playoffs, blown out in the wild card round by Baltimore at Gillette Stadium.

This current Patriots team also has some major issues – no Julian Edelman, a secondary that was destroyed by Jay Cutler less than a month ago, a front seven that could very well be the worst in the NFL, and a QB in Brady who hasn't thrown for over 300 yards in a game since before Thanksgiving.

The difference this year for the Pats, though, is the rest of the field in the NFL Playoffs. Absolutely no one in the AFC scares you.

At least last year, there was some doubt that the Patriots could lose at home to the Steelers having not played them in the postseason in quite some time. Today, though, it's clear that the Pats still have Pittsburgh's number.

The NFC is also less intimidating than it was a year ago. Last year, Pats fans shivered at the thought of Aaron Rodgers and the MVP-version of Matt Ryan meeting their so-so defense in the Super Bowl. This year, if the Pats again land in the Super Bowl, they'll likely face Nick Foles (Eagles), Case Keenum (Vikings) or second year QB Jared Goff (Rams). Not exactly like staring down a Peyton Manning or Eli Manning or Kurt Warner or even a Joe Flacco in the playoffs.

The Pats have the best odds in the 12-team field to win it all, once again. The Pats are a 2-1 favorite, followed by the Vikings (4-1), Steelers (9-2), Saints (5-1), Rams (12-1) and Eagles (15-1).

Sounds about right.

The first victim

The Patriots will play the Chiefs, Titans or Bills on Saturday, Jan. 13 at Gillette in the divisional round of the playoffs.

While the conventional wisdom says that the Pats don't

Dion Lewis and the Patriots are in a great spot to repeat as Super Bowl champions with this season's playoffs just days away. GETTY IMAGES want to see Alex Smith and the Chiefs that night given what Kansas City did to them way back on Sept. 7 (a stunning 42-27 Chiefs win), it's good to remember that the Pats almost always get revenge whenever they've been humiliated.

Hell, the Chiefs are the best example of this as they blasted the Pats on a Monday night in the 2014 season, only to be dismissed rather easily by the Pats in the 2015 divisional round.

Aside from a 30-13 home win over the Chargers on Dec. 16, the Chiefs have played like hot garbage since Halloween. Belichick will surely steal from what the Cowboys, Giants, Bills and Jets did against KC during the Chiefs' four-game losing streak and will mirror it in the divisional round if it is indeed the Chiefs who land in Foxboro 10 days from now.

As for the Titans or Bills winning in Foxboro in January? Please.

Tennessee is incapable of putting up 30 or more points in a game against a top team, and the Bills have already faced the Pats twice this season (both Patriots victories).

Regarding the Bills,

Belichick is historically great when he sees a team the second time around – never mind when he gets a look at them three times in the span of a month and a half.

While the "Isaiah Thomas Revenge Game" will have to wait until Feb. 11, there will still be plenty of drama in the barn on Causeway Street tonight (8, NBC Sports Boston) when the Cleveland Cavaliers make their first trip of the season to Boston.

Kyrie Irving might go down as LeBron James' biggest rival ever considering their less-than-amicable divorce this past year, and there's been plenty of passive-aggressive bulletin board material that's been thrown since the split.

In November, LeBron was asked by Bleacher Report's Howard Beck about Thomas' return to the team and LeBron said, "It's been a while since I've had that clear-cut guy who can get guys involved but also score at the same time."

When Kyrie originally asked for a trade out of Cleveland, LeBron posted an Instagram video with the song lyric: "[Racial expletive] said they with you when they really not."

LeBron James will square off with Kyrie Irving and the Celtics for the second time this season tonight at the Garden. GETTY IMAGES

In October, Kyrie wore a hat that read, "Popularity contests are not truth contests." He also was caught on video at a wedding, also attended by Steph Curry, keeled over laughing when Curry made fun of LeBron's workout video.

Both sides have been hesitant to go into detail about their time together in Cleveland as well as the circumstances surrounding the blockbuster trade that had Thomas and Kyrie swapping cities.

The individual rivalry between LeBron and Kyrie took a backseat on opening night in Cleveland when Gordon Hayward went down with that gruesome injury in the opening minutes. Kyrie had 22 points and 10 assists in that one while LeBron pumped in 29 points and had 16 rebounds in a 102-99 Cavaliers win.

Aries Hold on to your money, job and stability by doing what's expected of you and carrying out your own plans. Intelligence and common sense will be required.

Taurus Be careful how you handle domestic matters. Someone may not see things the same way you do. Be willing to compromise and to listen to wise advice.

Gemini Concentrate on your relationships with others and determine who you are best off spending time with. Stick to people who are a positive influence on you.

Cancer Be careful not to go overboard. You can have fun and be moderate at the same time. Emotional incidents will surface if you are too aggressive or inconsistent.

Leo Distress will kick in if you let someone take advantage of you emotionally. Avoid being indulgent or overspending on items you don't need.

Virgo Don't overdo it. Added stress will set in if you make promises you don't want to keep. Consider the best way to make the most of your time.

Libra Emotions can make people do foolish things. Don't make a hasty decision, or you will end up having regrets. This is not the time to burn bridges or start a feud.

Scorpio Take a step back to avoid getting into an emotional feud. Too much of anything will come back to bite you. Keep your life simple, affordable and moderate.

Sagittarius Taking care of other people's business will be draining. Don't make promises you cannot keep or get involved in something you aren't capable of handling.

Capricorn Emotions will push you in a direction that could lead to uncertainty. Consider the consequences should things not go as planned.

Aquarius Look for professional alternatives that will encourage a better use of your experience and allow you to learn. An ambitious attitude will bring good results.

Pisces Assess your financial situation and consider your job prospects. Having a plan will help you stay on track as the year unfolds. EUGENIA LAST
